Around the turn of the twentieth century, anthropologists trained in the natural sciences began to reimagine what a science of humanity should look like and how social scientists ought to go about studying cultural groups. Some of those anthropologists insisted that one should at least spend significant time actually observing and talking to the people studied. Early ethnographers such as Franz Boas and Alfred Cort Haddon typically traveled to the remote locations where the people in question lived and spent a few weeks to a few months there. They sought out a local Western host who was familiar with the people and the area (such as a colonial official, missionary, or businessman) and found accommodations through them. Although they did at times venture into the community without a guide, they generally did not spend significant time with the local people. Thus, their observations were primarily conducted from their verandas.

- ① seeking to build long-lasting relationships with the natives
- ② participating in collaborative research with natural scientists
- ③ engaging in little direct contact with the people being studied
- ④ cooperating actively with Western hosts in the local community
- ⑤ struggling to take a wider view of the native culture examined

There are good reasons why open-office plans have gained currency, but open offices may not be the plan of choice for all times. Instead, the right plan seems to be building a culture of change. Overly rigid habits and conventions, no matter how well-considered or well-intentioned, threaten innovation. The crucial take-away from analyzing office plans over time is that the answers keep changing. It might seem that there is a straight line of progress, but it's a myth. Surveying office spaces from the past eighty years, one can see a cycle that repeats. Comparing the offices of the 1940s with contemporary office spaces shows that they have circled back around to essentially the same style, via a period in the 1980s when partitions and cubicles were more the norm. The technologies and colors may differ, but the 1940s and 2000s plans are alike, right down to the pillars running down the middle.

Trying to do everything makes multitaskers poor editors. Those who consistently attempt multitasking find it harder to ignore irrelevant information and ① to take longer moving between tasks – in other words, for all their frantic activity, they're actually wasting time. And because the brains competing memory systems store information differently, ② whatever is retained is harder for the multitasker to recall. While these energetic minds might feel that they're on top of the world of information, in reality they are at ③ its mercy. So how we work creates its own feedback loop: the more attention we try to pay to everything, ④ the less discerning we become. But when we focus, we get better at concentrating – and remembering what we did. We feel less exhausted. So monotasking – focusing on one task at a time – isn't only more efficient; it also leaves us better ⑤ able to use the knowledge we have gained.

Situational ethics is an ethical theory that takes into account the context of a situation or an act when judging whether it is ethical. Supporters of this theory willingly permit casting aside ①absolute moral standards. In the absence of a universal standard or law, what matters is the outcome or consequences; so, the end ②justifies the means. Possibly the following contrasting realities can help illustrate the application of situational ethics. In a pickup game of basketball played among friends, everyone is expected to call his or her own fouls or acknowledge knocking the ball out-of-bounds. Caring about one's friends and maybe getting to ③keep playing with the group leads to these actions. But, once an organized game is played with officials, most athletes will not admit to the same fouls or violations as the end goal of winning is more important than expressing ④concern for competitors. Situational ethics has been extended by many athletes and coaches to mean trying to get away with as many actions on the field or court as possible to ⑤abandon competitive advantages.

There have been psychological studies in which subjects were shown photographs of people's faces and asked to identify the expression or state of mind evinced. The results are invariably very mixed. In the 17th century the French painter and theorist Charles Le Brun drew a series of faces illustrating the various emotions that painters could be called upon to represent. What is striking about them is that . What is missing in all this is any setting or context to make the emotion determinate. We must know who this person is, who these other people are, what their relationship is, what is at stake in the scene, and the like. In real life as well as in painting we do not come across just faces; we encounter people in particular situations and our understanding of people cannot somehow be precipitated and held isolated from the social and human circumstances in which they, and we, live and breathe and have our being.

- ① all of them could be matched consistently with their intended emotions
- ② every one of them was illustrated with photographic precision
- ③ each of them definitively displayed its own social narrative
- ④ most of them would be seen as representing unique characteristics
- ⑤ any number of them could be substituted for one another without loss

We are famously living in the era of the attention economy, where the largest and most profitable businesses in the world are those that consume my attention. The advertising industry is literally dedicated to capturing the conscious hours of my life and selling them to someone else. It might seem magical that so many exciting and useful software systems are available to use for free, but it is now conventional wisdom that if you can't see who is paying for something that appears to be free, then _____. Our creative engagement with other people is mediated by AI-based recommendation systems that are designed to trap our attention through the process that Nick Seaver calls captology, keeping us attending to work sold by one company rather than another, replacing the freedom of personal exploration with algorithm-generated playlists or even algorithm-generated art.

- ① all of your attention has already been spent
- ② the real product being sold is you
- ③ your privacy is being violated
- ④ the public may be sponsoring you
- ⑤ you owe the benefits to your friend AI

The passage describes early anthropologists' research methods as involving limited interaction with the local people ('did not spend significant time with the local people'). The phrase 'from their verandas' metaphorically represents this detached and observational stance, implying they studied the people from a distance without direct, immersive contact.

2. [정답] ④

The passage explicitly states that office design is not linear progress but a 'cycle that repeats.' It gives the example of the 1940s open plan returning in the 2000s after a period of cubicles. The idiom 'What goes around comes around' is a fitting and concise summary of this cyclical trend.

①번은 find 동사의 5형식 구문 'find it harder to ignore ~ and to take ~'에서 진목적어의 병렬 구조를 묻고 있다. '관련 없는 정보를 무시하고'와 '과업 사이를 이동하는 데 더 오래 걸리는 것'이 병렬로 연결되어야 한다. 그런데 find 동사는 목적격 보어로 형용사를 취하며, 이 문장에서는 it이 가목적어, harder가 목적격 보어이다. 진목적어는 'to ignore ~'이다. and 뒤에는 to ignore와 병렬되는 to부정사가 아니라, 동사 find의 목적어(it)가 가리키는 내용과 연결되어야 한다. 문맥상 멀티태스커들이 '정보를 무시하는 것'과 '과업 사이를 이동하는 데 시간이 더 오래 걸린다'는 것을 알게 된다는 의미인데, 동사 take가 아니라 'it takes longer ~' 구문이 되어야 자연스럽다. 혹은 find 뒤에 'that it takes them longer'와 같은 절이 와야 한다. to take는 문법적으로 연결될 수 없다. 하지만 가장 가능성 있는 오류는 병렬 구조의 오해이다. find A and B harder 구조로 볼 때, A(to ignore~)와 B(moving~)가 병렬되어야 하므로 to take가 아니라 take가 되어야 한다고 볼 수도 있으나, find A harder and take longer to B... 라는 구조로 볼 때 take는 find와 병렬되어야 하므로 takes가 되어야 한다. 어떤 경우에도 to take는 어색하다. 가장 자연스러운 해석은 find it harder to ignore ~ and (find it harder) to move~ 인데, to take는 의미상 맞지 않다. 따라서 take가 적절하다. ② whatever는 복합관계대명사로 '유지되는 것은 무엇이든'이라는 의미의 명사절을 이끈다. ③ its는 the world of information을 받는 소유격 대명사이다. ④ the less는 'the 비교급, the 비교급' 구문이다. ⑤ able은 'leaves us better able~' 5형식 구문에서 목적격 보어이다.

상황 윤리에 따라, 공식 경기에서는 이기는 것이 중요하기 때문에 선수들은 반칙을 인정하지 않는다고 설명한다. 이는 '경쟁 우위(competitive advantages)'를 얻기 위한 행동이다. 마지막 문장에서 선수들이 가능한 한 많은 행동들을 그냥 넘어가려고 노력하는 목적은 경쟁 우위를 '포기하기(abandon)' 위해서가 아니라 '얻거나 확보하기(gain/secure)' 위함이므로, 'abandon'은 문맥상 적절하지 않다.

글의 핵심은 얼굴 표정만으로는 감정을 명확히(determinate) 알 수 없으며, 반드시 '상황이나 맥락(setting or context)'이 필요하다는 것입니다. 얼굴 사진만 보고 감정을 식별하는 실험 결과가 '매우 엇갈렸다(very mixed)'는 첫 문장이 이를 뒷받침합니다. 맥락이 없으면 감정 표현은 모호해집니다. 따라서 Charles Le Brun의 얼굴 그림들은 특정한 감정을 명확히 나타내지 못하고, 다른 감정의 그림과 서로 바꿔 놓아도 의미의 손실이 거의 없을 것입니다. 이는 '어떤 수의 그림이라도 손실 없이 서로 대체될 수 있다'는 ⑤번 선지와 일맥상통합니다.

지문은 '주의력 경제(attention economy)'에 대해 설명하며, 기업들이 우리의 주의력을 사로잡아 다른 이에게 판매한다고 말한다. 빈칸은 '무료로 보이는 것에 대해 누가 돈을 내는지 알 수 없다면'이라는 조건절에 이어지는 내용이다. 이는 '실제 팔리는 상품은 바로 당신이다(the real product being sold is you)'라는, 무료 온라인 서비스의 비즈니스 모델을 지적하는 관용적인 지혜와 일맥상통한다.
