Improved consumer water consciousness may be the cheapest way ① to save the most water, but it is not the only way consumers can contribute to water conservation. With technology progressing faster than ever before, there ② are plenty of devices that consumers can install in their homes to save more. More than 35 models of high-efficiency toilets are on the U.S. market today, some of ③ them use less than 1.3 gallons per flush. Starting at $200, these toilets are affordable and can help the average consumer save hundreds of gallons of water per year. Appliances ④ officially approved as most efficient are tagged with the Energy Star logo to alert the shopper. Washing machines with that rating use 18 to 25 gallons of water per load, compared with older machines that use 40 gallons. High-efficiency dishwashers save ⑤ even more water. These machines use up to 50 percent less water than older models.

An increasing number of self-help groups have emerged in recent years. These voluntary groups ① in which people share a particular problem are often conducted without a professional therapist. During ② regularly scheduled meetings, members share their stories, stresses, feelings, issues, and recoveries. Information and knowledge are open and ③ sharing rather than protected and controlled. They learn that they are not alone; they are not the only ④ ones facing the problem. Self-help groups have been formed ⑤ to deal with problems ranging from overeating and drug addiction, to child abuse, single parenting, adjusting to cancer, and gambling.

Your parents may be afraid that you will not spend your allowance wisely. You may make some foolish spending choices, but if you ① do, the decision to do so is your own and hopefully you will learn from your mistakes. Much of learning ② occurs through trial and error. Explain to your parents that money is something you will have to deal with for the rest of your life. It is better ③ what you make your mistakes early on rather than later in life. Explain that you will have a family someday and you need to know how ④ to manage your money. Not everything ⑤ is taught at school!
