With 30 percent of United States workers not getting enough sleep at night, according to the Wall Street Journal, U.S. companies lose 63.2 billion annually due to the drop in employee productivity ① resulting from sleep deprivation. Sleep-deprived workers generally have lower morale than ② are their better-rested colleagues. One of the primary causes of workers lack of sleep is the work itself. The hours the average American spends working have increased dramatically since the 1970s, making ③ it hard for many workers to get a good nights sleep. To combat the problem of sleep deprivation in a demanding work environment, some companies have begun allowing workers to take naps. Although employees who sleep on the job ④ are often considered lazy and unproductive, napping in the workplace has been shown to improve workers efficiency and quality of life. As long as companies continue to demand long hours from workers, managers should champion napping as a means to keep employees more lively and ⑤ awake.

There are lots of myths about taking care of bad breath. Here are two things you may have heard about bad breath that (A) is / are not true. One of them is that mouthwash will make bad breath go away. Mouthwash only gets rid of it temporarily. If you do use mouthwash, look for an antiseptic and plaque-reducing one. Secondly, as long as you brush your teeth, you are said not to have bad breath. The truth is (B) that / what most people only brush their teeth for 30 to 45 seconds, which just doesn't solve the problem. To sufficiently clean your teeth, you should brush for at least 2 minutes at least twice a day. Remember (C) brushing / to brush your tongue, too.

"My secret is hidden within me; my name no one shall know." Those are the words, roughly translated, from the famous Puccini aria Nessun Dorma. You have probably heard Luciano Pavarotti sing it once or twice. But it has never had so much meaning as it (A) did / was on a stage in Great Britain, being sung by a mobile phone salesman named Paul Potts. Potts is an average-looking man (B) his / whose teeth are not straight. He admits to having battled self-confidence issues for his whole life. Still, he decided to audition for a television show. Then, he made it. We all have a passion, a secret buried within us. And yes, for the most part, the world will never know our names. But that does not mean we haven't made an impact, changed lives for the better, or (C) had / have a meaningful life on this planet. Find your inner Paul Potts. Everyone has one.
