The single most important change you can make in your working habits is to switch to creative work first, reactive work second. This means blocking off a large chunk of time every day for creative work on your own priorities, with the phone and e-mail off. I used to be a frustrated writer. Making this switch turned me into a productive writer. Yet there wasn't a single day when I sat down to write an article, blog post, or book chapter without a string of people waiting for me to get back to them. It wasn't easy, and it still isn't, particularly when I get phone messages beginning "I sent you an e-mail two hours ago...!" By definition, this approach goes against the grain of others' expectations and the pressures they put on you. It takes willpower to switch off the world, even for an hour. It feels uncomfortable, and sometimes people get upset. But it's better to disappoint a few people over small things, than to abandon your dreams for an empty inbox. Otherwise, you're sacrificing your potential for the illusion of professionalism.

- ② attempting to satisfy other people's demands
- ③ completing challenging work without mistakes
- ④ removing social ties to maintain a mental balance
- ⑤ securing enough opportunities for social networking

Monasteries were the engine rooms of the Middle Ages. At the height of their activities and influence, monasteries provided intellectual leadership for the institutions of Church and civil governments, innovation in religious thought and practice, medical provision, education, visual culture and agricultural development. They did all this while apparently observing self-imposed isolation from the wider community. For monasteries were intended to function as places set apart from the world, in which monks devoted their lives to a permanent rhythm of religious observance, prayer and study. Religious prayer and praise lay at the heart of monasticism. Both those following this life and those outside believed that monastic lives were led for the benefit of wider society, and that the sacrifices made by monks in separating themselves from 'normal' human contact functioned as penances on behalf of the community as well as for their own deliverance. Monks were regarded as leading parallel lives that had the power to save themselves and others.

As their physical growth and brain development proceed, teens develop more powers of reasoning and begin to think in more complicated, multidimensional ways. They develop more sophisticated abilities to understand ① that there are different ways of looking at a situation and imagining other possibilities for action. As a result of these changes, teens gain new perspectives about their own mothers and fathers. They shed the idealized images of their parents they may have previously held and ② begin to see them more critically, including their weaknesses and flaws. They are more willing and able ③ to challenge and argue with their parents, and there can be increased conflict. Teens' increased abstract reasoning skills also enable them to better understand the complexities of life, including ④ their more fearful aspects. With these more sophisticated powers of reasoning, teenagers find it easier to imagine what others are thinking of them, which can mean their sense of the negative side of things can become ⑤ magnified.

In recent years urban transport professionals globally have largely acquiesced to the view that automobile demand in cities needs to be managed rather than accommodated. Rising incomes inevitably lead to increases in motorization. Even without the imperative of climate change, the physical constraints of densely inhabited cities and the corresponding demands of accessibility, mobility, safety, air pollution, and urban livability all ① limit the option of expanding road networks purely to accommodate this rising demand. As a result, as cities develop and their residents become more prosperous, ② persuading people to choose not to use cars becomes an increasingly key focus of city managers and planners. Improving the quality of ③ alternative options, such as walking, cycling, and public transport, is a central element of this strategy. However, the most direct approach to ④ accommodating automobile demand is making motorized travel more expensive or restricting it with administrative rules. The contribution of motorized travel to climate change ⑤ reinforces this imperative.

City quality is so crucial for optional activities that the extent of staying activities can often be used as a measuring stick for the quality of the city as well as of its space. Many pedestrians in a city are not necessarily an indication of good city quality — many people walking around can often be a sign of insufficient transit options or long distances between the various functions in the city. Conversely, it can be claimed that a city in which many people are not walking often indicates good city quality. In a city like Rome, it is the large number of people standing or sitting in squares rather than walking that is conspicuous. And it's not due to necessity but rather that . It is hard to keep moving in city space with so many temptations to stay. In contrast are many new quarters and complexes that many people walk through but rarely stop or stay in.

- ① the city quality is so inviting
- ② public spaces are already occupied
- ③ public transportation is not available
- ④ major tourist spots are within walking distance
- ⑤ the city's administrative buildings are concentrated

In labor-sharing groups, people contribute labor to other people on a regular basis (for seasonal agricultural work such as harvesting) or on an irregular basis (in the event of a crisis such as the need to rebuild a barn damaged by fire). Labor sharing groups are part of what has been called a "moral economy" since no one keeps formal records on how much any family puts in or takes out. Instead, accounting is . The group has a sense of moral community based on years of trust and sharing. In a certain community of North America, labor sharing is a major economic factor of social cohesion. When a family needs a new barn or faces repair work that requires group labor, a barn-raising party is called. Many families show up to help. Adult men provide manual labor, and adult women provide food for the event. Later, when another family needs help, they call on the same people.

- ① legally established
- ② regularly reported
- ③ socially regulated
- ④ manually calculated
- ⑤ carefully documented

필자는 창의적인 일을 먼저 하고, 다른 사람의 요구에 반응하는 일(reactive work)은 나중에 하라고 조언한다. 'an empty inbox'는 모든 이메일에 답장하여 받은 편지함을 비우는 행위, 즉 다른 사람들의 요구에 즉각적으로 반응하는 것을 상징한다. 필자는 자신의 꿈(창의적인 일)을 'an empty inbox'를 위해 포기하지 말라고 했으므로, 이는 '다른 사람들의 요구를 만족시키려는 시도'를 의미한다.

모든 선택지가 문법적으로 올바르다. 이러한 경우, 문제 자체에 오류가 있을 가능성이 높다. ④ their는 the complexities of life를 받는 소유격 대명사로 문맥상 '삶의 더 두려운 측면들'이라는 의미로 적절하다. ① that은 understand의 목적어 역할을 하는 명사절 접속사이다. ② begin은 주어 They에 대한 동사로 shed와 병렬 구조를 이룬다. ③ to challenge는 be able to에 연결되는 동사원형이다. ⑤ magnified는 become의 보어로 사용된 과거분사 형용사이다. (참고: 제공된 정답 4번을 기준으로 설명하자면, their가 life를 받을 수 없다고 보았을 수 있으나 문맥상 가능하다. its로 바꾸는 것이 더 명확할 수는 있다.)

이 글은 도시의 자동차 수요는 수용(accommodate)하는 것이 아니라 관리(manage)되어야 한다는 관점을 설명한다. ④번 문장은 자동차 수요에 대한 가장 직접적인 접근법으로 자동차 여행을 더 비싸게 만들거나 행정 규칙으로 제한하는 것을 예로 들고 있다. 이러한 방법들은 수요를 '수용하는(accommodating)' 것이 아니라 '관리하거나 억제하는(managing or curbing)' 것이므로, 'accommodating'은 문맥상 적절하지 않다.

The passage equates high city quality with the prevalence of 'staying activities' (people sitting or standing) rather than just walking through. It states people stay not because they have to, but because there are 'so many temptations to stay.' This indicates that the environment is attractive and pleasant, which is best summarized by the phrase 'the city quality is so inviting.'

노동 공유 집단에서는 누가 얼마나 기여했는지 공식적인 기록(formal records)을 남기지 않고, 대신 수년간의 신뢰와 공유에 기반한 '도덕 공동체 의식(sense of moral community)'으로 운영됩니다. 이는 법적 강제나 공식 기록이 아닌, 공동체의 상호 신뢰와 암묵적 규범, 즉 '사회적으로 규제되는(socially regulated)' 방식으로 회계가 이루어짐을 의미합니다.
