Here is a fundamental quality of music. Note names repeat because of a perceptual phenomenon that corresponds to the doubling and halving of frequencies. When we double or halve a frequency, we end up with a note that sounds remarkably similar to the one we started out with. This relationship, a frequency ratio of 2:1 or 1:2, is called the octave. It is so important that, in spite of the large differences that exist between musical cultures, every culture we know of has the octave as the basis for its music, even if it has little else in common with other musical traditions. This phenomenon leads to the notion of circularity in pitch perception, and is similar to circularity in colors. Although red and violet fall at opposite ends of the continuum of visible frequencies of electromagnetic energy, we see them as perceptually similar. The same is true in music, and music is often described as having two dimensions, one that accounts for tones going up in frequency and another that accounts for the perceptual sense that we've come back home again each time we double a tone's frequency.

- ① identified tonal differences within the same octave
- ② returned to the original note with an identical frequency
- ③ reached a note named the same but with a different pitch
- ④ restored musical sensitivity by adapting to various octaves
- ⑤ constructed frequency patterns from notes with the same name

The concept of overtourism rests on a particular assumption about people and places common in tourism studies and the social sciences in general. Both are seen as clearly defined and demarcated. People are framed as bounded social actors either playing the role of hosts or guests. Places, in a similar way, are treated as stable containers with clear boundaries. Hence, places can be full of tourists and thus suffer from overtourism. But what does it mean for a place to be full of people? Indeed, there are examples of particular attractions that have limited capacity and where there is actually no room for more visitors. This is not least the case with some man-made constructions such as the Eiffel Tower. However, with places such as cities, regions or even whole countries being promoted as destinations and described as victims of overtourism, things become more complex. What is excessive or out of proportion is highly relative and might be more related to other aspects than physical capacity, such as natural degradation and economic leakages (not to mention politics and local power dynamics).

Undoubtedly, one of the most difficult skills to learn is how to keep a discussion focused. It is your task as chair to keep the discussion on track without appearing rude or domineering. If you do not do this, there is bound to be a growing feeling that the real purpose of the meeting is not being achieved. One useful 'trick of the trade' is to thank people for their contributions so far, to remind them of what the main issues are what they need to decide on, and to draw their attention to aspects of the topic that have not yet been discussed. Towards the end, you can ask if anyone else wishes to contribute before you call for a vote. In extreme cases, you will need to be very assertive and to remind people of the ground rules whereby they agree to listen to each other without interruption, and to avoid being domineering. On occasion, you may need to address the person who is being domineering, thanking them for making their point so clearly, but asking them to 'sit back for a while to allow other members of the group to put their points forward. *

In economic systems what takes place in one sector has impacts on another; demand for a good or service in one sector is derived from another. For instance, a consumer buying a good in a store will likely trigger the replacement of this product, which will generate ①demands for activities such as manufacturing, resource extraction and, of course, transport. What is different about transport is that it cannot exist alone and a movement cannot be ②stored. An unsold product can remain on the shelf of a store until bought (often with discount incentives), but an unsold seat on a flight or unused cargo capacity in the same flight remains unsold and cannot be brought back as additional capacity ③later. In this case an opportunity has been ④seized, since the amount of transport being offered has exceeded the demand for it. The derived demand of transportation is often very difficult to reconcile with an equivalent supply, and actually transport companies would prefer to have some additional capacity to accommodate ⑤unforeseen demand (often at much higher prices).

People have always needed to eat, and they always will. Rising emphasis on self-expression values does not put an end to material desires. But prevailing economic orientations are gradually being reshaped. People who work in the knowledge sector continue to seek high salaries, but they place equal or greater emphasis on doing stimulating work and being able to follow their own time schedules. Consumption is becoming progressively less determined by the need for sustenance and the practical use of the goods consumed. People still eat, but a growing component of food's value is determined by its aspects. People pay a premium to eat exotic cuisines that provide an interesting experience or that symbolize a distinctive life-style. The publics of postindustrial societies place growing emphasis on "political consumerism," such as boycotting goods whose production violates ecological or ethical standards. Consumption is less and less a matter of sustenance and more and more a question of life-style and choice.

Even as mundane a behavior as watching TV may be a way for some people to . To test this idea, Sophia Moskalenko and Steven Heine gave participants false feedback about their test performance, and then seated each one in front of a TV set to watch a video as the next part of the study. When the video came on, showing nature scenes with a musical soundtrack, the experimenter exclaimed that this was the wrong video and went supposedly to get the correct one, leaving the participant alone as the video played. The participants who had received failure feedback watched the video much longer than those who thought they had succeeded. The researchers concluded that distraction through television viewing can effectively relieve the discomfort associated with painful failures or mismatches between the self and self-guides. In contrast, successful participants had little wish to be distracted from their self-related thoughts!

- ① ignore uncomfortable comments from their close peers
- ② escape painful self-awareness through distraction
- ③ receive constructive feedback from the media
- ④ refocus their divided attention to a given task
- ⑤ engage themselves in intense self-reflection

지문은 주파수가 두 배가 되면(옥타브) 원래 음과 매우 유사하게 들리는 '음고 인식의 순환성'에 대해 설명한다. 'come back home again'은 이러한 순환성으로 인해, 주파수는 다르지만(즉, 음고는 다르지만) 인지적으로는 같은 이름의 음으로 돌아온 느낌을 받는 것을 의미한다. 따라서 이는 '이름은 같지만 음고는 다른 음에 도달했다'는 것을 함축한다.

필자는 과잉 관광(overtourism)을 단순히 '사람으로 가득 찬 장소'라는 물리적 수용 능력의 문제로 보는 기존의 관점에 이의를 제기합니다. 에펠탑과 같은 일부 명소는 수용 능력에 한계가 있지만, 도시나 국가 단위에서는 문제가 더 복잡해진다고 말합니다. 과잉 여부는 물리적 수용 능력 외에 자연 파괴, 경제적 누수, 정치 등 다른 측면과 더 관련이 있는 '상대적인(relative)' 개념이라고 주장합니다. 따라서 과잉 관광은 단순히 사람과 장소의 문제가 아니라는 제목이 글의 핵심을 가장 잘 나타냅니다.

③번은 'what the main issues are'와 'what they need to decide on'이라는 두 개의 명사절을 연결하는 부분이다. 두 개의 명사절을 나열할 때는 접속사 and가 필요하다. 따라서 'what the main issues are and what they need to decide on'이 되어야 한다. what 자체는 명사절을 이끄는 관계대명사/의문사로 각각의 절 안에서는 올바르게 사용되었다. ① is는 단수 주어 One에 대한 단수 동사이다. ② being은 전치사 without의 목적어로 쓰인 동명사이다. ④ assertive는 be동사의 보어인 형용사이다. ⑤ asking은 thanking과 병렬 구조를 이루는 분사구문이다.

문맥상 팔리지 않은 항공기 좌석은 저장할 수 없어 나중에 다시 팔 수 없으므로, 판매할 기회가 사라진 것이다. 'the amount of transport being offered has exceeded the demand for it(제공된 운송량이 수요를 초과했다)'는 상황은 기회를 잡은(seized) 것이 아니라 놓친(missed/lost) 것이다. 따라서 'seized'는 문맥상 적절하지 않다.

글은 소비가 생존(sustenance)이나 실용적 사용(practical use)과 같은 물질적 필요보다는, 흥미로운 경험, 독특한 생활 방식의 상징, 윤리적 기준 등과 같은 가치에 의해 점점 더 결정된다고 설명합니다. 따라서 음식의 가치 또한 이러한 '비물질적인(nonmaterial)' 측면에 의해 결정되는 비중이 커지고 있음을 추론할 수 있습니다.

실험 결과, 시험 성과에 대해 부정적인 피드백(failure feedback)을 받은 참가자들이 긍정적인 피드백을 받은 참가자들보다 TV 비디오를 훨씬 오래 시청했다. 연구자들은 이를 'distraction through television viewing can effectively relieve the discomfort associated with painful failures(TV 시청을 통한 주의 분산이 고통스러운 실패와 관련된 불편함을 효과적으로 완화할 수 있다)'고 결론 내렸다. 이는 사람들이 고통스러운 자기 인식(painful self-awareness)으로부터 주의 분산(distraction)을 통해 벗어나기(escape) 위해 TV를 본다는 것을 의미한다.
